The first pivotal step in our growth-oriented vision occurred on June 30, 2021, when Sr. Kathy Dougherty and I signed an agreement that Neumann would purchase Our Lady of Angels Convent and 63 acres of land from the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia. This critical acquisition virtually doubled the size of our campus overnight and allowed us to set in motion a campus master plan that will improve the academic, athletic and social experience for students during the next 13 years and beyond.

The agreement also fits perfectly with the Sisters’ plans. According to Sr. Kathy, “Frankly, we’ve reached a point at which we no longer needed or could justify owning these facilities and this land. Our sisters did not join this community because of a building or a parcel of land. They came to serve. Moving forward, we wanted to make sure that we could sustain our mission and support the ministries we have established over the years.”

Neumann has promised to preserve the sacred spaces on the congregation’s former home and to welcome continued residence by approximately three dozen Sisters for the next several years.

With the support of the University Board of Trustees and the ongoing partnership with the Sisters of St. Francis, Neumann’s master plan blueprint will transform our campus with a welcoming new entryway and additional residential spaces in the Motherhouse. Other goals of our ambitious plan call for a student union, ice rink, outdoor track, and student apartments.

Most important, the plan preserves and extends the university’s commitment to a faith-based Catholic, Franciscan education. The Motherhouse, the sacred spaces on the land, and our RISES values are integral to our mission and identity.

We ask for your prayers as we embark on this exciting new journey to provide the world with leaders who embrace the Franciscan charism.

Two $100K Gifts Endow Scholarships

Two donors have given Neumann $100,000 gifts to endow scholarships for students. John and Joan Mullen have endowed a scholarship in the name of Sr. Marguerite O’Beirne ’70, OSF, the university’s longtime vice president for mission and ministry, who retired in June of this year. This scholarship will be awarded to a student who demonstrates a commitment to the university’s Catholic Franciscan values and is active in Campus Ministry.

Another $100,000 scholarship gift came from the Society of the Friendly Sons and Daughters of St. Patrick in partnership with the Joseph P. Heenan Family Foundation. This donation will endow the Society of the Friendly Sons and Daughters of St. Patrick, Thomas Edward and Agnes Rita Heenan Memorial Nursing Studies Fund for undergraduate nursing students.

COVID Update

With a requirement in place that students, faculty, and staff be vaccinated against COVID-19, most fall 2021 classes (67 percent) were held in person. Masks were also required in all campus buildings. The number of reported cases as of December 10 was 45 (19 resident students, 20 commuter students, and six employees).

By the end of October, 92 percent of faculty and staff and 89.4 percent of students had been vaccinated. Exemptions for medical or religious reasons were granted to 10.5 percent of students, who have been required to submit weekly coronavirus test results, and to all remaining employees.

New Leadership Certificate Program

Neumann’s Center for Leadership has launched a seven-week leadership certificate program for working professionals who want to enhance their ability to lead teams thoughtfully, strategically and ethically. Students discuss the specific values that are critical to success, apply them to their own leadership roles, and identify strengths and areas for improvement.

According to Judi Stanaitis ’07 ‘13, director of the Center for Leadership, the goal is to teach young professionals and those in middle management how to distinguish themselves through their expertise and, as a result, boost their careers.

CDC Celebrates 50th

Eli Haug, son of Dr. Christopher Haug, and President Chris Domes give a thumbs-up to the university’s Child Development Center (CDC) at its 50th anniversary celebration in September.

A state-licensed child-care facility, the CDC houses an educational program for children aged 3 to 5. Director John Sperduto estimates that, during its five decades, the CDC has served more than 1,200 children. Although the current building was not opened until 1973, CDC services began in 1971, the year when the university (then Our Lady of Angels College) initiated a bachelor’s degree program for adult women.
Knights’ Pantry Serves Students
For the first time in its history, Neumann has opened a food bank for students. The Knights’ Pantry, meant to alleviate food insecurity, began operations on September 8 on the fifth floor of the Rocco Abessinio Building. It offers non-perishable food and personal hygiene items to any undergraduate or graduate student with a university ID, no questions asked.

Designed to look like a small convenience store with aisles and rows of shelving, the pantry is the brainchild of Rina Keller, professor of Social Work, and Mary Beth Davis, counselor at Neumann’s Counseling Center for Wellness. Their goal is that the Knights’ Pantry will evolve into a student-run organization.

9/11 Memorial Service

Mentorship Program Honors Aideen Murphy
Only weeks before Dr. Aideen Murphy passed away in mid-April, she shared an idea with Dr. Michelle Santana. Murphy wanted to establish a mentorship program for first-generation students at Neumann. As a first-generation student herself, Murphy knew the difficulties that this group of students faced in navigating the often-unfamiliar headwinds of higher education.

When Murphy died suddenly, Santana enlisted Bettsy McKlaine, director of admissions degree completion and graduate programs, to bring the concept to fruition. In August 2021, the pair launched the Aideen Murphy Mentorship Program, named in honor of the former associate professor in the School of Education and Human Services. The program matches Neumann faculty, staff, and alumni who are willing to act as mentors with students who have requested guidance.

New MS in Forensic Psychology
Neumann will offer a master’s degree in Forensic Psychology starting in the fall of 2022. The program is designed for people currently working in law enforcement, corrections, social services, or psychology who want to develop skills in psychological and intelligence analysis. The 36-credit program can be completed in two years.

Kristen Acosta, a Criminal Justice professor who helped design the program, notes that a graduate “can become a juror consultant, forensic interviewer, or go on for a law degree.” The master’s degree can also lead to employment in homeland security, correctional systems, and social services. Some courses will introduce students to basic criminal profiling concepts.
Students to Run Sora Luna

When Sora Luna Lounge opened in October of 2019, it was meant to be a hub of student activity. Just five months later, COVID-19 stalled that plan. This year, Student Affairs and the School of Business reimagined the space as a student-run business with a graduate assistant and four student interns planning to open the eatery in the spring 2022 semester.

The interns and graduate assistant will report to Business Dean Eric Wellington. Their job responsibilities will include budgeting, accounting, marketing, managing, hiring, payroll, and numerous other business-related operations. The graduate assistant will have a managerial role, supervising the interns in the process.

PA Celebrates College Radio Day

On September 30, State Representative Leanne Krueger (District 161) read an official proclamation of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives on air at 98.5 WNUW, the radio station of Neumann University, recognizing October 1, 2021, as College Radio Day in Pennsylvania.

WNUW was one of more than 600 radio stations in 40 countries that celebrated College Radio Day and one of just two dozen stations that participated in a 24-hour marathon broadcast, led by students. The celebration unites college radio stations from around the world to generate awareness of the work and value they bring to the broadcasting medium.

U.S. News Ranks Neumann for Social Mobility

U.S. News & World Report has again ranked Neumann University among the Best Regional Universities in the North for social mobility in its Best Colleges 2022 issue. Neumann was also ranked among the best for social mobility last year, rising from #62 in the North in 2021 to #47 in 2022.

The ranking identifies colleges that are successful at advancing social mobility by enrolling and graduating significant proportions of economically challenged students who are eligible for Pell Grants. In the fall of 2020, nearly half of Neumann’s freshmen (46 percent) were first-generation college students.

New Film Studies Minor

Three faculty members have launched a Film Studies minor to help students develop the visual literacy skills that are necessary to participate in the civic community and workforce of a society in which the visual image is vital to communication.

Bill Hamilton (English), Kerry Hustwit (Communication and Digital Media), and Jim Kain (Liberal Arts) collaborated for more than two years to develop the minor in which students will choose from a wide range of theory, genre, production, and special-topics courses. The 18-credit minor offers two concentrations: Film Analysis (mainly English courses) and Film Production (mainly CDM courses).

Classroom Named for Sandra Weiss

On October 26, Neumann named a classroom in honor of Dr. Sandra Weiss, who retired in June after teaching clinical laboratory science for 45 years. Weiss came to Neumann in 1976 and became director of the university’s clinical laboratory science program in 1985. She is pictured here with Dr. Chris Domes in front of the plaque that names the room in her honor.
Civic Engagement

Neumann lived up to its name as a Voter Friendly Campus this fall, hosting a series of programs to give students the opportunity to learn about current events and engage in the democratic process. Topics ranged from the Electoral College and Catholic Perspectives on Social Justice to Understanding Facts and Truth in a Troubling World and Constitution Day Bingo. Activities concluded with a campus-wide voter registration drive.

Deeper Commitment to Sustainability

Neumann University has joined the Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education (AASHE) to further campus sustainability efforts. AASHE is an association of more than 900 colleges, businesses, nonprofits and other organizations that are working to create a sustainable future.

Through membership in AASHE, Neumann will receive support through workshops, webinars, toolkits, an online community of sustainability officers, and an online resource library to advance its sustainability initiatives throughout the institution and in the community.

Graduate Assistant Program Expands

In the fall of 2020, the first three trailblazing graduate assistants in the history of the university worked on campus. One year later, the number of GAs jumped to nine, all working in the student affairs unit. According to Dr. Chris Haug, vice president for student affairs, the nine GAs will work with his team to expand student activities, provide leadership opportunities, and offer resident students experienced counsel for navigating college life.

Graduate assistants work a set number of hours per week and, in return, receive a tuition waiver, a monthly living stipend and, in some cases, housing. The campus responsibilities that graduate assistants have must connect directly to the academic field that they study.

The Path to Sainthood for Fr. Bill Atkinson

In the 2000-year history of the Catholic Church, Bill Atkinson was the first quadriplegic to be ordained as a priest. After being paralyzed in a tragic tobogganing accident, he entered the priesthood and taught from 1975 to 2004 at Monsignor Bonner High School. Now, he might be on the path to sainthood.

In September, Stephen McWilliams presented a program on Atkinson’s life and journey ahead as the church considers the case for his canonization. One of Atkinson’s closest friends, McWilliams now works for the cause of sainthood for the former priest and teacher.

Nursing Students Support Community Day

Neumann nursing students and faculty continued their tradition of supporting Aston Community Day by offering free blood pressure screenings at the annual celebration, held this year on Saturday, October 2.

After a parade that stretched along Concord Road from campus to the Aston Community Center, students Alexandria Flacco, Tori Ponto, Michael Rovinski, and Hannah Strobl (daughter of faculty member Patti Strobl) took blood pressure screenings at the center. All are members of the Community Health Nursing class.
Robert McMonagle, PhD, is a self-described realist. A Political Science professor, called “Doc” by his students, Dr. McMonagle believes that “politics is about how the world works.” He cites early twentieth century political scientist Harold Lasswell for the best definition of politics: “Who gets what, when and how.”

McMonagle’s devotion to pragmatism, however, does not limit his imagination. He is a man of ideas who is deeply intrigued by the application of both practical and creative concepts to the political systems that govern society.

The courses he has taught in his more than 20 years at Neumann range from Political Economy and Constitutional Law & Civil Liberties to Political Philosophy and Contemporary American Political Issues. In the classroom, he emphasizes critical thinking and communication skills, both written and verbal. Former students recall the debates and business memos that he assigns with aching frequency.

In Dr. McMonagle’s classes, “we wrote papers — all the time — and made oral presentations, too,” recalls Jamie Lenko, a law student in Delaware who appreciated the classroom rigor. “One day, I’m going to have to stand in a court room and get my argument across.”

Doc McMonagle is also known for his teaching and research on energy and the environment, two issues that he believes are inseparably intertwined. At one time, he admits that he was “relatively neutral on the environment” but cites two influences that altered his thinking. Before beginning his teaching career, McMonagle served as a deputy legislative director on Capitol Hill for Oregon Congressman Bob Smith, who represented several sparsely populated counties near the border with Idaho.

McMonagle recalls that Smith always used to say that he “served people who make their living off the land.” He was an early influence in McMonagle’s environmental awareness, especially given his visits to Oregon’s Second Congressional District to meet with constituents.

He expanded his Temple University doctoral dissertation into a book, Caribou and Conoco, which explains the political and social variables that drive important public policy debates on energy and the environment.

McMonagle is also a proponent of civic engagement, working with other faculty members on campus to support voter registration drives, visits to campus by public officials of both parties, and events to celebrate the service of veterans. He’s known for his Pizza and Politics debate-watching parties, which are regularly followed by some lively discussion of the issues by students.

Several years ago, the professor successfully negotiated an agreement to allow Neumann students to participate in Temple’s Harrisburg Capitol Semester program and use credits toward a Neumann Political Science degree. Neumann’s participants have advanced to law school and consulting work. He believes that internships in Washington, D.C., would also provide valuable experience for students and has discussed with President Chris Domes his support for gaining this experiential learning for Political Science majors.

An admitted political junkie, McMonagle has twice thrown his hat into the ring as an independent Republican candidate. He ran for Congress in 1996 and for Delaware County Council in 1997, both times without official party endorsement or funding. He lost both races but broke 12,000 votes in 1997 on a “reform” platform and supports recent successes including the creation of a Delaware County Health Department in the age of COVID-19. “It is long overdue.”

When asked how he evaluates success in the classroom, McMonagle doesn’t hesitate. “The best way to measure outcomes is by the success of our students. We may be a small program, but the quality of our alumni is stellar, given the breadth of their careers in law, education, business, and the non-profit sectors.”

Doc holds a PhD in Political Science from Temple University and a master’s degree in Public Policy Studies from the University of Chicago. He first started teaching at Neumann in 1996 as an adjunct and became a member of the full-time faculty in 2002.
After a 2020 homecoming that was largely virtual, Neumann alumni returned to campus on October 15 – 17 to participate in some traditional festivities and experience new events that were designed to please young and old.

Students kicked off the celebration during the week with a banner contest, Neumann trivia game, homecoming pageant, silent dance party, and CANstruction contest (using cans of food to design structures and then donating the food to the Knights’ Pantry).

On Friday afternoon, Dr. Chris and Mary Domes hosted a reunion brunch for alumni of Our Lady of Angels College, and Angel Smedley ’90 hosted virtual Designer Bag Bingo that evening.

Saturday activities began with a home run derby and the popular Philadelphia General Hospital Endowed Nursing Lecture. This year’s topic was Home Health Care, presented by Steven Landers MD, MPH, president & CEO of VNA Health Group.

In addition to Saturday’s picnic lunch, the youngest Knights enjoyed outdoor activity, led by Arendelle sisters Elsa and Anna, the stars of Frozen. There was also a visit from Captain America, who did his own “hero training.” The characters led sing-a-longs on the CDC lawn.

ATHLETICS ROUND UP

Cross Country
The Neumann cross country team was able to adapt well to a new coaching environment this season. The team demonstrated an excellent work ethic and gave 100% at each practice and meet.

The big wins for the cross country team this year came from freshman standout athlete Andrew Konieczny, who won the Dan Talbot Open in Neumann’s backyard at Rose Tree Park in Media and then placed ninth at the University of Delaware Invitational.

In the off-season, the team plans to work on gaining more self-confidence and focus. According to head coach Chris Simpson, “Overthinking and running do not mix very well.”

Women’s Volleyball
The Neumann women’s volleyball team finished the 2021 season with a 4-2 record in the Atlantic East Conference and 13-18 record overall.

The Knights entered conference post-season play as the three seed. In the first round of the playoffs, the Knights defeated Immaculata University 3-0, but the Knights’ season ended in the semifinal round as they were defeated by Marymount.

During the season, the Knights had a very balanced attack lead by Ariana Pena, Breanna Hickey, Maria Brown, Dani Smith and Catie Esslinger. Regan Hickey, Lauren Garvey, Anna Mansel and Jules Dill all played key offensive roles. Tori Burgess and Reagan Walker anchored a stellar defensive unit.

Ariana Pena was named to the Atlantic East First Team All Conference while Bre Hickey and Dani Smith were named to the Second Team All-Conference.

Women’s Soccer
The Neumann women’s soccer team had a successful season that included post-season play. The team achieved a 2-0 first-round playoff victory against Immaculata University, which led to an appearance in the conference semi-final for the first time since 2013. The squad finished with a record of 7-10 (3-3 conference).

Standouts included all-conference players Jordan Bard, Emily Cooper and Chloe Britton. Jordan Bard qualified for all-region consideration and Emily Cooper qualified for Scholar All-American consideration.

The team is already looking forward to next season and is eager to get back onto the turf.

Men’s Soccer
The Neumann men’s soccer team had a successful season, making it all the way to the Atlantic East Conference Championship game before falling to Cabrini University.

The team’s biggest win of the season came in the Atlantic East semifinals at Immaculata. Trailing by a goal at halftime, an inspired group
Field Hockey

First year coach Erik Enters and his assistant, Jillian Tutak (DeFina ’15), took over just two days before the start of preseason. Captains, juniors Rachel Koerner and Lizzie Frame, were leaders on the pitch and started every game for the Knights.

Other key players who made significant progress and who will be a force for the league to reckon with are sophomores Hailey Craft and Ronnie Johnson along with freshmen Lexi Stouffer, Gi Guido, Elle Smith, and Kaitlin Smith.

The field hockey team finished 3-14 in the regular season and lost their first-round Atlantic East Conference Tournament game, 2-0, to Gwynedd Mercy.

Men’s Lacrosse: Coaches of the Year

The men’s lacrosse coaching staff was named Coaching Staff of the Year by the Atlantic East Conference for the 2021 season.

The Knights went 6-4 overall for the season and 4-2 in the conference, advancing to their first conference championship game since 1999.

One element that makes this coaching staff unique among its peers is that each coach is an alumnus of Neumann University.

Sixth-year head coach, Kyle Gardner, graduated in 2011 and captained the men’s lacrosse team during his sophomore, junior and senior seasons. He was joined by Bryan Capone, a 2010 graduate and senior year captain; Evan Zielinski, a 2014 and 2020 graduate and sophomore, junior, and senior year captain; Connor Betts, a 2016 graduate and senior captain; Tyler Schlimme, a 2017 graduate and senior captain; and Adam Fagan, a 2018 graduate and junior and senior captain.

“When we were given the opportunity to help rebuild the men’s lacrosse program, we identified team culture and player experience as being the two main focal points that we believed would help us to rebuild a competitive and sustainable program,” Gardner said of the lacrosse program’s rebuilding.

From year one, they tried to recruit diligently, looking for the right people for their program as opposed to looking only for the best lacrosse players they could find. Next, they invested in student athletes who invested in them, as a coaching staff, and Neumann University as their collegiate community.

Their recruiting process has always been a bit “organic” in the sense that each recruiting class takes shape at its own pace.

“Once we had begun to yield the right people, it was 90% about developing our student-athletes to believe in our program’s cultural philosophies and 10% about developing them as individual lacrosse players,” Gardner adds.

The coaches describe their style as “player-centric” in that their barometer of success is not solely wins and losses but, more importantly, the experience of the players who choose to invest their collegiate lacrosse experience in Neumann University and the alumni coaching staff.

The coaching staff and team are eager to get back on the field this season and not only return to the conference championship game but bring home the title.
Live Nativity Returns to Campus

After a year without Greccio because of COVID-19, the Neumann community and its Aston neighbors were able to capture the Christmas spirit again as the annual Live Nativity re-enactment returned to campus on December 1.

Students, faculty, and staff re-enacted the Franciscan tradition of the crib, performing the live nativity scene and the scripture narration on the front lawn of the Mirenda Center. The program also featured the sounds of sacred Christmas music, presented by a community choir of university students and parishioners from St. Joseph’s Church in Aston.

St. Francis of Assisi created the first live nativity scene in Greccio, Italy, in 1223. Now a traditional element of Christmas celebrations around the world, the ritual has been celebrated ever since.

A petting zoo of manger animals was on site for the young and young at heart, and after the re-enactment, children enjoyed refreshments and a special visit from Santa.

An Intern’s Dream Experience: You’re Hired

Thomas Andruszko’s internship had a storybook ending. On the last day of his two-month stint with J.P. Morgan last summer, the firm offered him a full-time job.

It didn’t matter that Andruszko still had to complete his senior year at Neumann. He had impressed his managers so thoroughly that they made the commitment to bring him on board.

“I felt like I did a good job,” says Andruszko. “I tried to take on responsibility, communicate well, and take work off my manager’s plate.”

Andruszko’s experience was technically with the J.P. Morgan office in Newark, Delaware, but the entire internship was remote. He worked with the team that handles financial control for corporate investment. His assignments were primarily focused on fact checking financial records and researching financial statements.

“I also did a lot of investigative work on an important balance sheet project,” he recalls. “I think that was one reason for my positive reviews.”

A Business Administration major with a minor in Finance, Andruszko found the internship through Handshake, the software that Neumann’s Career and Personal Development Office uses to connect students with prospective employers. He’s set to begin his career in July 2022 in a rotational program, changing teams from year to year to give him a broad overview of the J.P. Morgan operation.

“I’m really grateful,” he says about the job offer. “I feel like they made an investment in me.”

He believes that his Neumann education prepared him for the marketplace and gushed about some good counsel from Dr. Jeff Graber. “Some of the best advice I got came from Dr. Graber to take an Accounting class. That class was really valuable for my internship, and I’m taking another one this semester.”
Neumann University has named Sister Mary Kathryn Dougherty, OSF, as its vice president for mission and ministry. Sr. Kathy assumed her new role on December 1, 2021, following Sr. Marguerite O’Beirne ’70, OSF, who had held the post for more than 20 years.

“As a Sister of St. Francis, I have always been proud of Neumann University and the RISES values that are pervasive throughout the institution,” said Sr. Kathy. “I have met so many wonderful faculty, staff, students, administrators and board members who embrace the mission and live our Franciscan values daily. I feel blessed and excited to have this opportunity, being a part of NU, to build on our strengths and seek new ways to further the mission. As Neumann plans for the future, I am energized by its potential growth and the many possibilities to promote our values.”

Dr. Chris Domes is especially pleased to welcome such a seasoned administrator to the university’s executive team. “Sr. Kathy has extensive experience in educational leadership and administration;” he noted. “In fact, she served as director of university ministries at St. Bonaventure University for four years. Her intellect and commitment to our Franciscan mission will be valuable assets as we look to the future and begin to implement the campus master plan.”

Sr. Kathy was elected as congregational minister of the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia in June 2014 and finished her term in July 2021. She has been a professed member of the congregation for 40 years, taking her final vows in 1981. Born in Baltimore, Maryland, Sister Kathy holds a B.A. in Psychology from Notre Dame of Maryland University and an M.A. in Systematic Theology from the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana.

Sr. Kathy’s ministry has primarily focused around education on all levels. She taught at the Catholic High School of Baltimore, St. Peter Claver School, St. Anthony of Padua School, and St. Francis-Charles Hall High School, Baltimore. She was the director of university ministries at St. Bonaventure University in St. Bonaventure, New York, from 1997-2001. Her formation ministry was as director of candidates during that same time, after which she became director of the congregation’s novitiate program. From 2005-2010, Sister Kathy was an adjunct professor at Neumann University.

In 2010 Sister Kathy returned from renewal and, while exploring ministry options, came across an opening for a chaplain at the Baltimore City Women’s Detention Center. She visited the center and knew that was where she had to be. Sister Kathy served as chaplain of the center from 2010-2014. She was also living out the Franciscan commitment to responsible stewardship of the Earth at this time by trying to live as self-sustaining as possible on a farm in White Hall, Maryland, for a few years.

Over the years Sister Mary Kathryn has served on numerous committees and boards including the Catholic High School of Baltimore, St. Joseph Medical Center, and the Province Peace and Justice Committee. During her time as congregational minister, Sr. Kathy served as the congregational liaison for many additional boards and committees.

“As a Sister of St. Francis, I have always been proud of Neumann University and the RISES values that are pervasive throughout the institution.”

Our Lady of Angels and 63 Acres

Neumann University and the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia officially signed a purchase agreement on June 30 to formalize the sale of several historic properties and contiguous land to the university.

Under the agreement, Neumann, at what both parties described as fair market value, will acquire the Our Lady of Angels Motherhouse Convent owned by the Sisters of St. Francis. The convent, built in late 1800s, is considered one of the most recognized, historic, and beloved buildings in the Aston area.

The transaction also includes the purchase of St. Elizabeth House, a two-story residential facility and office building, two residential homes, and nearly 63 acres of land.

The land acquisition includes sacred spaces — most notably Our Lady of Angels Cemetery — and iconic statues and symbols. The university has vowed to preserve these spaces, statues, and symbols in keeping with its long-time commitment to the Catholic, Franciscan intellectual tradition and Neumann’s ongoing partnership with the Sisters of St. Francis.

The sale positions Neumann to nearly double its campus footprint to accommodate future growth and enhance all aspects of its mission.

The university’s ambitious new master plan calls for the transformation of its campus over a 15-year period. Highlights of the buildout include a welcoming entryway and lively pedestrian-only zone at the heart of campus. With support from a variety of stakeholders, plans also call for a student union, ice rink, outdoor track, and new student residences.

As many as 60 students are expected to move into one wing of the convent by the fall of 2022, with the total reaching 100 – 120 within three years.

“This acquisition works on so many levels,” said Neumann President Chris Domes. “This is a great win-win, and the sisters feel the same way. It positions us to strengthen the residential experience for our students and supports our desire for expanded extracurricular programs and athletics.”

“This acquisition works on so many levels.

The university will preserve the sacred spaces on the 63 acres adjacent to the convent.
“Equally important,” Domes noted, “it preserves and extends the university’s commitment to a faith-based Catholic, Franciscan education and our ongoing partnership with the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia. The motherhouse, which includes Our Lady of Angels Chapel, and the sacred spaces are integral to our mission and identity.”

The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, a congregation of Catholic women who commit their lives to God and in service to others, see the sale as an opportunity to continue their mission to serve “the needs of others, especially the economically poor, the marginal, and the oppressed,” without the burden of maintaining properties and land.

At their height in 1958, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia numbered 1,600 sisters working in grade schools and high schools, hospitals and centers of nursing, and in social services. The congregation now includes about 360 sisters in 19 states, Ireland, and Africa, with a median age of 82. Approximately 35 sisters expect to maintain residence in the convent.

“Though bittersweet in many ways, this transaction allows us to focus solely on our mission and ministries,” said Sr. Kathy Dougherty, outgoing congregational minister for the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia. “Frankly, we’ve reached a point at which we no longer needed or could justify owning these facilities and this land.”

“Our sisters,” she added, “did not join this community because of a building or a parcel of land. They came to serve. Moving forward, we wanted to make sure that we could sustain our mission and support the ministries we have established over the years.”

“Neumann,” Dougherty said, “is the perfect fit to carry our legacy forward. We are thrilled about that. It’s a true blessing.”

As part of the agreement, the acquisition of property will take place incrementally over time. The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia will lease space in the convent for resident Sisters and offices for the next several years. The Sisters of St. Francis will maintain ownership of Assisi House, Red Hill Farm, Clare House, and the Hermitages.

Flyers Warriors Partner with Neumann

Devon Richio ’16, a captain in the Philadelphia Fire Department, is a graduate of the Public Safety Administration degree program. He is also a member of the Flyers Warriors ice hockey team, where his teammates are all veterans with some form of emotional or physical disability.

Thanks to a Neumann-Warriors partnership initiated by Richio, his teammates can now follow in his footsteps and earn an undergraduate or graduate degree.

The Flyers Warriors team is one of 37 military ice hockey teams in the country. Men and women train and compete on the ice in three different tiers: Advanced, Intermediate, and Learning to Play. The Warriors players are coached by Flyers alums Brad Marsh, Bob Kelly, and Rob Baer.

“Our role is to help facilitate the education piece of the incredible holistic program that has been built for their players,” explained Jill Donnelly, executive director of adult and continuing education. “They are an extraordinary group of people. I was honored to be in the same room with all of them. This program fulfills a part of our mission. It’s totally a Franciscan outreach.”

“This is a great opportunity and a unique one at that. It’s something that hasn’t been offered to a Warriors program. We are the envy of the Warriors program in the U.S. with Neumann University coming on board and the support we get from the Flyers,” said Duffy.
Bernhardt ’16 is Upper Darby’s Top Cop

In Tim Bernhardt’s new position, he deals with people from 65 different countries who speak over 50 languages. While it may sound like he is employed by the United Nations, he actually works in law enforcement in Delaware County. Bernhardt was sworn in as the new Upper Darby Township Police Department Superintendent on September 23, 2021.

Bernhardt brings a long history of law enforcement to his new position. He has worked in the field for 22 years, 17 years with Upper Darby Township. Having grown up in the Drexel Hill section of the township, he is proud to have the opportunity to give back and support the residents.

He remembers hearing the phrase, “one world, many cultures,” in a class he had with Dr. Sam Lemon at Neumann. The phrase stayed with him, and he uses it as a mantra in his current position.

“That seemed to be true in Upper Darby. We have to be understanding and show empathy to the people that we serve every day,” he said. “If you get involved with the community, the community will be involved with you.”

Bernhardt is a champion of change and innovation. He spearheaded the department’s Racial Intelligence Program, which provided training and certification for all 133 officers and has taken the lead to install body cameras on all his officers by January 2022.

Johnson ’12 is Counseling’s Best in Pennsylvania

The Pennsylvania Counseling Association (PCA) selected Lewis Johnson to receive its 2021 Outstanding Graduate Student Award. Johnson, coordinator of academic services in the John C. Ford Student Success Center, will earn his second Neumann degree in May 2022 with an MS in Pastoral Clinical Mental Health Counseling.

The PCA is the state branch of the American Counseling Association. The association’s mission is to promote and support the competent, ethical, and culturally inclusive practice of professional counseling in Pennsylvania. In addition, the association works to protect and advocate for all counselors and their clients.

The PCA’s Outstanding Graduate Student Award is given to an individual who is currently a graduate student in professional counseling within the state and who shows excellent potential and professionalism.

In April, Johnson received a scholarship from the organization, intended to support BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, People of Color) members of the group. He also represented the PCA as the graduate student member for PASERVIC, the Pennsylvania Association for Spiritual, Ethical, and Religious Values in Counseling.

Johnson has been juggling his full-time position at Neumann with his grad school studies for the past three years. He also counsels clients through an internship at the Phoenix Trauma Center in Media, Pennsylvania, where he was just hired as a counselor-in-training by another alumnus, Dr. Scott Giacomucci ’13, the founder and director of the Center.
Neumann Welcomes Two New Trustees

Florence M. Hee ’84, OSF, PhD, is a Sister of St. Francis of Philadelphia and lives and ministers in Wilmington, DE. She holds a bachelor’s degree in religious studies, a master’s degree in administration and supervision, and a PhD in industrial/organizational psychology.

Over the years Sr. Florence has ministered in the field of education as a teacher and principal in elementary Catholic schools and as an adjunct instructor for the strategic leadership graduate program at Neumann University. She also ministered as director of mission at the congregation’s sponsored high school in Baltimore, MD, and as coordinator of Incorporated Province Ministries for the U.S.-Ontario Province of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary, located in Maylhurst, Oregon.

Prior to her role as a member of the congregation’s leadership team, she was charism coordinator for her congregation and responsible for initial and ongoing formation. Occasionally, she facilitates meetings and gatherings for women religious congregations in various locations.

In addition to Neumann University’s board, she is a member of the Board of Directors and Secretary for the African Sisters Education Collaborative (ASEC) located in Scranton, PA, which coordinates educational programs for women religious sisters in 10 African English-speaking countries.

Maggie Gannon, OSF, EdD, is a Sister of St. Francis of Philadelphia and ministers in Chester, PA. She holds a bachelor of science degree and master’s degree in education from Chestnut Hill College. She earned her EdD in educational leadership from Immaculata University in 2006.

Sr. Maggie has been instrumental in the educating of young children for over 15 years. She was the principal of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in Morton, PA, and the president of Drexel Neumann Academic in Chester, PA. Drexel Neumann Academy was founded with the unique structure of an extended school day and extended school year. This model provides the children with a safe place to be and opportunities for additional instructional time and recreation.

Sr. Maggie is currently the co-director of Anna’s Place, where she works collaboratively with staff to provide food relief to the people of Chester. In addition, she is also the co-director of the ACCESS Community Center, which will be the only community center in the city of Chester when it opens in the fall of 2022. Services will include medical, legal, and housing assistance services as well as food relief and a daily meal. ACCESS was created with input from community members and seeks to meet the needs of the people of Chester.

In addition to Neumann University’s board, she sits on the Board of Joseph’s House in Camden, NJ, and the ACCESS Community Center in Chester, PA.
The existence of a solid and supportive alumni base is crucial to the success of any university. In order to strengthen Neumann’s alumni connection, the University Advancement team has appointed a new alumni director and tapped a veteran staffer to focus on young alumni engagement.

In October, Jacqueline (Jackie) Marciano joined the UA staff as director of alumni and parent engagement. She comes to Neumann from Cabrini University, where she was the director of alumni engagement and development. In addition to working with alumni, Marciano also created engagement programs for parents. She will report to Judi Stanaitis ’07 ’13, assistant vice president for alumni and community outreach.

Marciano plans on increasing parental engagement and involvement at Neumann. She is reviewing the programs and events that are currently in place with plans to ramp up activity. In addition, she looks forward to collaborating with other departments, such as athletics, admissions, and career development, to build engagement opportunities.

“I’m excited to make a program with various events on campus to increase parent engagement and to work with different offices to really see how we can service the community and build upon the great framework already in place at Neumann,” Marciano said.

Other changes in the alumni office include the promotion of Colleen Graf ’15 ’20 to associate director of student and young alumni programs. Graf, who joined the advancement office in 2018, will report to Marciano.

Graf will develop programs and engagement strategies in this new position, beginning with first-year students through their first ten years as alumni. The goal is to increase participation, foster a lifelong connection with NU, and develop a causeway to philanthropic investment.

“I am now going to be the synergy between students and the advancement office. I will be the first line of engagement that students have with advancement,” Graf explained.

Graf will now run the Presidential Ambassador program. She plans on getting students more involved in alumni networking events and mentorship programs with alums.
Kelly Family, Friends Honored at the Thanksgiving Reception

Dozens of donors filled the Bayada Atrium on the evening of November 18 for the President’s Thanksgiving Reception, Neumann’s annual event that recognizes supporters for their continued generosity and commitment to the university.

Special honorees at the 2021 event were the Brendan P. Kelly ’87 Committee and the Kelly family.

Brendan Kelly, a member of the Neumann University class of 1987, died in December 1988. Two years after his death, his friends and family launched the Brendan P. Kelly ’87 Memorial Scholarship with the blessing of Sharon Kelly, Brendan’s mother. In the past 31 years, the fund has grown to more than $425,000 and has supported 90 Neumann students.

According to President Chris Domes, “Fundraising in Brendan’s name began after his passing with grassroots efforts, including basketball tournaments, beef and beers, personal donations, t-shirt sales, golf outings, and social events to cement Brendan’s legacy in an institution that embraced him wholeheartedly.”

Conner Kolek, senior marketing major and a recipient of the Kelly Scholarship, spoke to the crowd about what the financial assistance has meant to him.

“This scholarship, along with working jobs throughout my college experience, has made it possible for me to graduate with no student loans,” Kolek told the crowd, eliciting enthusiastic applause. “I am so grateful to the Kelly family and the Brendan P. Kelly Scholarship Committee for this humbling award. My college career would not have been the same without you.”

Later in the program, Richard Kern ’86, a founding member of the Kelly Committee and now an administrator at Neumann, shared his memories of Brendan Kelly and his experience as a founding member of the Kelly Committee.

“I would like to thank Mrs. Kelly and the entire Kelly Family for sharing Brendan with us while he attended Neumann,” Kern said. “Brendan was a good friend and teammate to all of us, and we loved him very much. His personality was larger than life.”

Because of their love for Brendan Kelly, his family and friends have forever etched his presence in Neumann’s history by assisting scores of students in achieving their dream of a college education.
The birth of a baby is truly a miracle and cause for a joyous celebration. Mike Forrest ’17 and his fiancée Kerri Klatcher ’17 experienced this joy when Klatcher’s sister, Lauren, gave birth to a girl, Harper Taylor, on January 29, 2020.

Tragically, Harper’s life ended only five days after she was born. This seemingly healthy baby developed a cough ten hours after birth and lost her battle to a blood infection despite heroic effort by the NICU staff at Nemours Children’s Hospital.

Forrest and Klatcher spent many days in the hospital, supporting Lauren and her husband Ryan during Harper’s short life. During this time, the two alumni noticed that other parents in similar situations did not have the emotional or financial support they needed while caring for a sick child in the NICU.

Forrest recounted a story about sharing pizza with a mom whose son was in the NICU at the same time as Harper. They watched the woman eat half of the slice and save the rest for her next meal.

“It really opened our eyes,” said Klatcher. “There are people who are single moms who have to do this all by themselves.”

Amidst their heartbreak and sorrow, they saw a need and knew what Harper’s legacy would be. The family’s goal became the formation of a non-profit with the mission to help other families with babies in the NICU. The non-profit, known as Harp’s Hope, was formed on July 20, 2020.

“‘There’s a lot of great peripheral services that hospitals offer but we fill in that niche for the in-between costs,’” Forrest explained.

According to the non-profit, 10 to 15 percent of babies born in the United States spend time in the NICU. These families incur indirect costs such as transportation, parking, and food which average $60 to $80 a day.

Harp’s Hope raised $10,000 last year. Forrest volunteers as the non-profit’s director of finance, and Klatcher serves as the social media manager. When they’re not focused on their family cause, Forrest is a project manager for Daniel J. Keating Company, and Klatcher is a kindergarten/special ed teacher at the Philadelphia Performing Arts Charter School.

Forrest and Klatcher welcomed Harper’s brother Reid to the family in February 2021. In addition to spending time with baby Reid, these two alums are also getting ready for their wedding on March 12, 2022.

Alumna Orchestrates Operations at Unique Philadelphia Museum

R. Scott Stephenson, president and CEO of the Museum of the American Revolution, has set an ambitious goal for his institution. He wants the museum to be “a movie you can walk through, a dramatic, immersive experience.”

The manager of operations and events at this non-traditional museum is Lauren Fisher, a 2015 Communications and Media Arts major. She has been with the museum since it opened in the spring of 2017 and, despite the suspension of events for 16 months because of COVID-19, has earned a key managerial role at the organization.

She handles daily operations, donor and benefactor-related events, educational programs and private events. “We host meetings, corporate events, weddings, educational tours, galas — and the list goes on. I oversee every single thing that happens in the museum. It’s a boatload of responsibility, but I welcome the challenge,” she says.

In fact, Fisher created the events department at the museum. She and her team have managed more than 3,000 events for the institution, sometimes as many as five per day. She stayed the course during COVID because “the museum really felt like home to me, and I wanted to be there long term.”

Managing events can be a very fluid operation with last-minute adjustments coming at a fast pace. “It’s all about rolling with the punches in the events industry,” says Fisher. “We had a luncheon scheduled one day and had to cancel because the building next door had a massive fire, so we moved the food downstairs and housed the people who just lost their home. We fed them and were a shoulder to lean on during a stressful time.”

Fisher remembers Neumann fondly and believes her undergraduate experience helped her develop the skills that she uses today. “It takes a lot of focus, drive, and organization to be successful,” she admits. “I was really able to apply myself at Neumann. I was close to so many teachers, and they were hands-on. Being in a small classroom with teachers who actually care helped me and drove me into my career.”

The museum, located at 3rd and Chestnut Streets in Philadelphia, houses original artifacts, manuscripts, rare books and works of art. The signature exhibit is General George Washington’s Revolutionary War tent, restored to its original glory. Yes, the real war tent, which served as the field headquarters of the Continental Army.

The galleries within the museum are organized chronologically to take visitors on a journey from the beginning of the conflict in the 1760s through the creation of the nation. It includes theaters, interactive screens, and exhibits.

The museum also presents a diverse picture of the Revolutionary War, including stories of enslaved and free African Americans, Native Americans and women — in addition to those of the Founding Fathers and soldiers — through immersive displays and fascinating artifacts that create a modern storytelling experience.

Mark Blount ’15

It seems like the premise for a feature film: a North Philadelphia kid plays basketball for a Division III university and earns a spot with the larger-than-life Harlem Globetrotters. For Mark Blount, this is his new reality, and he still pinches himself daily to make sure it’s not a dream.

For the past six years, Blount played for the Globetrotters’ opponents, the All-Stars (formerly the Washington Generals). On June 6, 2021, he was promoted to the Globetrotter roster, joining a list of legendary players like Meadowlark Lemon, Curly Neal and Wilt Chamberlain.

Maureen Breslin ’19

Maureen Breslin recently earned a graduate degree in Journalism at NUI Galway. The 12-month program required an internship, and Breslin landed a stellar one, interning last summer for POLITICO, a journalism company that covers politics and policy in the U.S. and internationally.

Mr. Otis Evans ‘84 held an impressive title at Neumann University: oldest alumni. He turned 100 years old in January 2021.

According to Evans’s son, Michael, his father was thrilled to celebrate this milestone and was equally thrilled to be a Neumann alumnus. Evans enrolled at NU at the age of 60 and completed his BA in Liberal Studies.

“Neumann University was the one place that gave my dad a chance. He wasn’t the typical student. They had a program that was flexible and would work for him,” Michael said of his father. “Wherever you are in your life, there’s a place at Neumann University for you.”

Neumann always held a special spot in Mr. Evans’s heart. He continued to be involved with the University even after he graduated. While in his 90s, Mr. Evans would still come to campus to volunteer in the alumni office.

Sadly, Mr. Evans passed away in August.

Mizzoni Releases Tenth Album

For the past 21 years, Dr. John Mizzoni has given the Neumann University community a taste of his musical talents. He has performed at the university’s Faculty Follies and for his students during class, but the depth of his musical achievements can best be measured by his catalog on Spotify. The music streaming site contains all ten of his albums.

A Philosophy professor, Mizzoni classifies his music as eclectic or folk-rock. His musical style was heavily influenced by bands from the 1960s and early 1970s, particularly the Beatles. “I’ve been in cover bands ever since high school. But it is mostly me on these albums,” he said.

In 1987, Mizzoni released his first album, called Originations 1, which contains 19 original songs. Since then, he has produced nine other albums with his most recent, Wordified Excursion, being released in July of 2021. This album took four years to complete, and he is already working on his 11th album. Currently, Mizzoni has 156 original songs listed on his Spotify page.
Through the past 14 years, Neumann University students have benefited from a relationship formed with one of the top broadcasting companies in the world — Beasley Media Group. This partnership was not developed by top NU officials meeting with the Beasley brass. It began with one very eager student looking to land an internship.

That student, now director of Neumann Media, is Sean McDonald ’09 ’12. When he was a student at Neumann, McDonald was looking for an internship. He stumbled upon one while picking up a prize he won from radio station WMGK 102.9FM.

As McDonald tells the story, he won $100 from the radio station and went to their office in Bala Cynwyd to collect it. A note was posted at the receptionist’s desk that listed an opening for a radio intern. McDonald, who was a computer information management major at the time, needed an internship and applied.

Fortunately, all the pieces fell into place, and McDonald began interning with Rodney Byrd, a station engineer. He soon began working on various projects like developing website streaming and building the transmitter site for another company station. Two months into the internship, McDonald was offered a remote broadcasting job. He also became a board operator for WMGK and WMMR.

Coincidentally, Neumann had just built an internet radio station and needed someone to run it. Enter McDonald.

Shortly after, he started bringing NU students with him to live radio events that he was working throughout the Delaware Valley.

But the big break for Neumann University, and NU students, came in 2015 when Byrd asked McDonald to video stream one of the most legendary events in Philly radio history — Preston and Steve’s Camp Out for Hunger on WMMR. The event, which began in 1997, had never been live-streamed before.

“We showed up with about seven cameras. About 10 students put together a full on-video production, including recaps during commercial breaks of what (they) just saw so the audience had something to watch,” said McDonald. “Each year, it’s grown bigger and bigger. And through this partnership, students are getting exposed to the type of work they want to pursue.”

And pursue they did. Several NU students are currently working for Beasley. Connor Betts ’16 is an assistant producer for the Preston and Steve show. Jake Loburak ’21 is a part-time videographer and Sean Spence ’20 works in the engineering department. Mike Ciaverelli ’19 produces streaming video for 97.5 The Fanatic, and senior Amanda Cunningham was just hired as a part-time remote engineer.

This partnership, created and cultivated by NU staff and students, has resulted in the university becoming the official sponsor of the Preston and Steve’s show live stream. The stream is posted every weekday to the station’s YouTube channel.
